WIFEY FLEES TO MOTHER'S ARMS

Mrs. Levi Cochran Goes to Home of Her Childhood and Husband is Resigned.

WILL JOIN THE REGULAR ARMY

Says That His Domestic Peace Has Been Disturbed by His Mother-in-Law Before.

Woman, woman, she has favored Uncle Sam. She has sent one more recruit to the regular army. Levi Cochran of West First street has become reconciled to his fate and will join the cohorts of the Stars and Stripes, since his wife has deserted him and for the last time, he says. His path was beset by many difficulties, when he wooed and won her and he has been troubled since that time, sheltering her and keeping her under his own protecting wing.

It seems that his parents by law have been the chief aggressors against his domestic happiness, at least that is his allegation, and have kept his otherwise quiet and peaceful household in a continual uproar. His wife has gone now and gone for good so far as he is concerned. By a clever piece of sleuth work, he has finally determined that his better half has flown to the arms of her mother and he will allow her to remain there. Today he was busily engaged selling his furniture and other effects, preparatory to entering the regular army.

"Hey, my wife has skinned out and left me agin!" was the manner in which a pedestrian was halted in West First street last evening. The man, who was called to stopped and was greeted with a series of apologies when Cochran, who had made the above explanation, learned that he was not the man he wanted.

"I thought you was that station agent man," was his reply. And then he rehearsed the story of his trials and tribulations, how he had been abused by his wife, had willingly sacrificed himself for her and now as a return for his life of self-denial, she ran off and left him. But he will not return to her, cringe at her feet and ask her to come back to his domicile, no not he. He is resigned now and will seek the sheltering wings of the Uncle Sam's army. He was once a member of the army and he found that life pleasant, compared to that which he has had under his own roof.

"They never raised any blisters on your hands in the regular army" was his comment.

Cochran felt that his domestic happiness was to be disturbed when his mother-in-law arrived from her home in Hartford City last Saturday. Then trouble began for him for he avers that she is like the relative who is made the butt of ridicule by so many jokesters. Cochran had sort of a premonition that something to ruffle his peace and quietude was to take place. He returned home yesterday noon for dinner, but lo! no dinner was to be found, nor was his wife. He later discovered a note written by his wife, which said that she had gone to Glenwood for the day, but that she would be back in the evening.

ILL LUCK PURSUES FAMILY

Two Children of Gordon Kincaid of Clarksburg Have Diphtheria.

Gordon Kincaid's two daughters, Mary Ellen and Mildred, are seriously ill at their home near Clarksburg of diphtheria and the elder, Mary Ellen, is not expected to recover. Mr. Kincaid seems to be an especial target for the fates. Only a few days ago his daughter, Mildred, fell at play and fractured the bones of her arm.

Cochran tucked his fears away in the innermost crevice of his heart and stoically went about his work all afternoon. In the evening he returned, but there was no wife to greet him at the doorstep. He felt certain then that she had left and he began a search. By means of a bit of detective work he has learned the destination of his wife. He went to the Pennsylvania depot and there, laying on the floor of the station, was a dainty, white handkerchief. He found some identification marks and finally arrived at the conclusion that it came from his wife's wardrobe. Inquiry at the station proved that his fears were correct, that his wife had purchased a ticket for Hartford City and gone there with her mother. He will join the army as soon as he can get to a recruiting station.

LIGHTS TAKE ON A BRIGHTER HUE

Larger Committee to Get Subscriptions Named and Cost Investigating Committee is Appointed.

AT BUSINESS MEN'S MEETING

Suggestion That Association Give a Fall Carnival After Horse Show Meets With Approval.

The new sidewalk lights are taking on a brighter hue at each and every meeting of the Rushville Retail Merchants' Association. At the called session, held in the court house last evening, a larger committee was appointed to look after subscriptions for the lights and another committee was named to act as investigators. They are to ascertain the exact cost of the lights and to determine the kind of posts and fixtures which will be used. A larger and more representative crowd of business men were out last night than has been in attendance at any meeting in recent months. All of the merchants spoke favorably of the light question and the opinion seems to be unanimous that they will be successful in their campaign to raise the money for the improvement.

It was decided last night that the investigating committee should go to Indianapolis Thursday to learn all they could concerning the new sidewalk lights, which have only recently been installed there. A carnival, to be pushed by the Association and held in the new Davis Brothers big livery barn after the horse show was suggested. A committee was appointed to investigate and make a report. It was agreed that a meeting should be held Friday night when the light investigating committee should report.

The meeting was called to order shortly after eight o'clock by President Ben L. Cox. When a report from the committee on raising the money was called, Bert Mullin, chairman of the committee, said that forty merchants in the proposed light district had signed their names to pay not more than twenty-five dollars each. He said that all of the business men had signed willingly so far and persuasion had not been needed in any case. He said that in very few instances the committee had been refused, but they will see all of the business men who have turned down the subscription paper in a second attempt to get their signatures.

A. T. Mahin, superintendent of the water and light plant, was present at the meeting and when the discussion arose as to the price of the new lights, he reported that he had a new sidewalk light under consideration, which would cost less money than the one which was presented to the merchants at the first meeting. He said that he had received a communication from a company, which agreed to furnish the posts and fixtures for forty-two dollars instead of fifty-six dollars as the plan was first presented to the merchants. Mr. Mahin said that the light looked just as good as the other one, which had been under consideration. If that light was used the total cost to the business men would not be over sixteen hundred dollars.

The new proposition was lost sight of, when Will Bliss moved that extra men be appointed on the committee to assist in getting the subscriptions and that another committee be appointed to investigate the exact cost of the new lights and to ascertain the kind which were to be installed here. The two motions were carried and the following committees were appointed: To investigate the cost and kind of posts to be used, Homer

ACTS SAME WAY IN SECOND CASE

Mayor Black Binds Ed Crosby Over to Circuit Court at Conclusion of Trial.

PRACTICALLY SAME AS FIRST

Two Men, Whose Names Were on the Receipt, Say They Received Money by the Week.

Immediately after all of the evidence had been introduced and the attorney for the State and the attorney for the defendant had made their pleas, Mayor B. A. Black bound Ed Crosby, the former trustee of Rushville township over to the Rush circuit court late yesterday afternoon. The preliminary hearing on the second count, in which it is charged that Ed Crosby forged the names of W. F. Jackman and Theodore Jarvis to a receipt and obtained $142, was held at that time. The evidence introduced by the State was practically the same as that in the first count. The defendant had no witnesses as Mr. Crosby was not placed on the stand. It was generally believed that the mayor would act as he had done in the other case, when he bound the former trustee over to the circuit court.

Charles W. Sutton, a field examiner from the State board of accounts, who, together with Edward P. Brennan, examined Mr. Crosby's reports, was placed on the stand first by the State. He testified that the voucher shown him was the one which he found filed with the former trustee's report in the auditor's office. He also said on the stand that he had made the examination of Mr. Crosby's report and had examined the witnesses in getting at his alleged shortage.

W. F. Jackman, who is now employed in Indianapolis, testified on the stand that he had worked for the former trustee in the year 1908, hanging paper. He replied, in answer to questions asked by the prosecutor, in substance that he had hung paper in school houses in Rushville township, while Mr. Crosby was trustee, and that he had received all of the money which was due him. In answer to how he received it, the witness said that he had been paid by the week and in nearly every instance by cash. When asked if he had ever received any money belonging to him and Jarvis, he replied no. When shown the receipt in question, supplemented by several questions from the prosecutor, Jackman replied that he had never signed the receipt nor had authorized the signature of it with his name, but he reiterated the statement that he had received all of the money coming to him for work done on school houses while Ed Crosby was trustee. He estimated that he had received approximately forty or forty-five dollars for his work as a paper-hanger that year.

On cross examination, which was conducted by George Young, counsel for the defense, Jackman told practically the same story. The attorney forced him to repeat that he had received all of the money which was due him for papering school houses during the year 1908. He said that he was paid by the piece.

Theodore Jarvis was the second witness for the State. He said on the stand that he papered several school houses for the trustee of Rushville township during the year 1908, to the best of his remembrance, four. He said that he was paid by the week for the school house work as he was all season for other kinds of work. When the receipt in question was placed before him by the State's attorneys, he said that he had never seen it before only when he was being questioned by the field examiner.

Jarvis testified that he did not sign the receipt, but that he authorized Ed Crosby to sign for him as he had received the money for the work, week by week. But the prosecutor would not be satisfied with that answer and put the question, "Did you authorize the signature of that receipt as it is, Theodore Jarvis and Jackman?"

"No sir, I did not, but I told him to sign my name to the receipt," replied Jarvis, still sticking to his original statement, that he had authorized his signature. In his rebuttal speech John Cheney, the prosecutor, said that Jarvis testified that he had not authorized the signature of the receipt.

In the cross examination, the State's star witness stuck to his original statement that he had authorized the defendant to sign his name to the receipt.

DEATH COMES AS BLOW TO FAMILY

Mrs. J. C. Clore, 38 Years Old, Expired at Her Home Early This Morning.

THE FUNERAL WILL BE FRIDAY

She is Survived by Husband, Daughter, Mother, Brother and Four Sisters.

Mrs. Lida Clore, thirty-eight years old, wife of J. C. Clore, grain and hay dealer, died at her home at 229 West Third street this morning shortly after three o'clock of pleuritic effusion. She had been ill for the past few months, although her disease did not assume a very serious aspect until August 22, when her condition became alarming. A dilation of the heart was the direct cause of her demise, but it was brought on by the inflamed and injured condition of the lungs. Her death came as a great blow to the members of her immediate family.

Mrs. Clore was born in Ohio, November 29, 1871, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Avey. She had been a resident of this city for several years, she and her husband moving here from Kentucky. Shortly after moving here, Mrs. Clore affiliated herself with the Main Street Christian church and was an earnest, sincere and faithful member of the church so long as her health permitted. She will be remembered as a member of the choir at the Christian church. Mrs. Clore was also much in demand to sing at funerals until her health failed her. She was a member of the order of Eastern Star.

Mrs. Clore is survived by her husband; one daughter, Mary Frances, two and one-half years old; four sisters, Miss Ella Avey of Delhi, a suburb of Cincinnati; Mrs. W. L. Brown of Cincinnati; Mrs. L. B. Patterson of Delhi; Mrs. George High of Delhi; one brother, Fred H. Avey, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Avey of Hyde Park, Cincinnati. The funeral services will be held at the home Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. R. W. Abberley. Burial will take place in East Hill cemetery.

HOMES WERE RIDDLED
BY BRISK FUSILADE

Bad Outbreak In Pennsylvania
Mining Town.

Irwin, Pa., Sept. 28.—A gang of men, evidently striking miners, armed with rifles, fired over 100 shots into the sleeping rooms in the homes of Superintendent Levi Good and John Olsen, mine foreman, of the Pennsylvania Gas and Coal company at Claridge, a mining town, about six miles from this place.

None of the occupants of either house was injured, although the panes in the windows in the sleeping rooms were shot out and the mirrors in the rooms shattered. A detachment of troopers from the state constabulary were hurried to the scene of the shooting.

In the home of Superintendent Good, Mrs. Good and four children were sleeping in the rooms on the second floor. Good and his wife were awakened by bullets crashing through the windows. Good realized that an attack was being made on his family, and he got his wife and children to lie on the floor until the shooting ceased, when he hurried with them to the cellar. The Olsen family also found safety in the cellar. Both houses were wrecked by the bullets. No arrests have been made. While the home of Good was being stormed with bullets, an attack was made on the home of Foreman Olsen. In the sleeping rooms of this house were Mrs. Olsen and seven children.

LOCKED UP

Mutinous Cadets Are Still Deprived of Their Liberty.

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Major General Thomas H. Barry, superintendent of the academy, has returned from Washington. When asked about the investigation of the mutiny of the cadet corps, he emphatically declared he had nothing to say. Asked if Colonel Sibley's order confining the cadets to their quarters before and after studies would remain in force, he said that Sibley might answer that. It is not improbable that Colonel Sibley's order will stand until the week end, at any rate. This will prohibit the football squad from their customary daily practice, and the games scheduled for Saturday with the University of Virginia may be cancelled.

HINSHAW AGAIN
SEEKING PAROLE

Wife Murderer's Case Before
the Pardon Board.

HE WANTS A SECOND CHANCE

Preacher Convict Who Was Once Paroled and Sent Back to Prison for a Gross Violation of His Parole, Has Appealed to the Board for Another Opportunity—Case Is Taking Its Regular Course.

Indianapolis, Sept. 28.—William E. Hinshaw, the minister who was sent to prison for life for having killed his wife at Belleville, about ten years ago, and who was paroled and subsequently reincarcerated for violation of the conditions of his parole, has appealed to the state board of pardons for a second parole, and his case will be heard during the present sitting which is in progress at the statehouse.

The Hinshaw case will take the regular course of cases before the board. Governor Marshall said he would here to the policy adopted by him when he became governor, and would not take any part in the consideration or investigation of the case.

"If there are any persons who are opposed to the release of Hinshaw," said the governor, "now is the time for them to place their objections before the pardon board. In this case, as in all others, I shall abide by the recommendations of the board."

Hinshaw was paroled as the last official act of Winfield T. Durbin when he turned the executive office over to J. Frank Hanly in January, 1905. The minister was out of prison about six months when he became involved in an affair with a woman at Wabash and was sent back.

HAD WARM GREETING
FOR CHINESE PRINCE

The President and Cabinet Welcomed Tsai Hsun.

Washington, Sept. 28.—President Taft entertained his imperial highness, Prince Tsai Hsun, uncle of the child emperor of China, and brother of the prince regent, at the White House last night. Members of the prince's suite including Vice Admiral Sir Sah Chen Ping, and Chow Tsze Chi, the Chinese minister, and all the members of the cabinet were at the dinner, and also Secretary Norton, Major General Leonard Wood, Captain Butt, and Beekman Winthrop, assistant secretary of the navy. The entertaining of the prince is the first interruption that the president allowed in his continuous cabinet meeting. The prince was welcomed to the city yesterday by a large party of officials, including Captain Butt, as the representative of the president. All the members of the Chinese legation were at the station to greet him. Secretary Knox made a formal call on the prince at 10 o'clock and Secretary of the Navy Meyer followed a quarter of an hour later.

In the afternoon the party visited Fort Meyer and watched a drill by the cavalry and artillery commands. Today the prince visited Annapolis and tomorrow will go down the Potomac to Mt. Vernon and will later leave for New York. The arrival of the Chinese prince somewhat obscured the sultan of Sulu's son, but he shone forth again today, when he called at the White House and was received by the president.

Weak Over-worked Women

Who are broken down and made invalids by the drudgery of never ending household cares and duties, or by over-frequent bearing and nursing of children, and many other cares, burdens and strains which the weaker sex have to bear, are deserving of profound sympathy. But while sympathy is commendable what these unfortunate women most need is a good, honest, square-deal Restorative Tonic and Strength-giving Nerve and Regulator—one compounded and carefully adapted to act in harmony with woman's peculiar, delicate, ever sensitive organization.

Who so well fitted to select, carefully proportion the ingredients and compound a remedy for the cure of these distressing and often pain-wracking weaknesses and derangements, as the carefully and thoroughly educated and regularly graduated physician who has had a long and successful experience in treating just this class of cases.

Find Indian's Skeleton

The skeleton of a man, doubtless an Indian, was uncovered in a gravel pit one day recently on the farm owned by George Bingham, in Blue River township, seven miles southeast of this city, by Mr. Bingham's son-in-law, Clarence Lacy, says the Greenfield Reporter. The skeleton was in an excellent state of preservation, the bones all intact. Half the teeth in the upper jaw were missing. The bones were in two feet of gravel and four feet under ground. The skeleton was placed in a box and is in a barn on the farm.

Twenty-eight years ago three skeletons were found within forty feet of where this was unearthed. Mr. Bingham is a student of Indiana history, and from his knowledge of the tribes of Indiana he is convinced that the man whose bones were found on his farm once "lived as we now live," and roamed the primeval forests as a member of the Wabash tribe. The Indian was a big man and reveals clearly the fact that these native Americans were athletes despite the absence then of physical culture schools and gymnasiums.

The Indian had been buried with his feet to the southwest—toward the setting sun. It is a universal custom in Christian nations to bury the dead with the feet toward the rising sun, but the Indian practice was the reverse, and they made the custom more specific by inclining the body toward the point of sunset at the season of the year the burial was made. In the early summer the body was placed with the feet toward the northwest, as the sun disappears from the horizon. Hence, the body found Friday was buried in the late fall when the sun sinks from view far south of west.

THE THIN AND WEAK

Easy Way for Them to Get Strong And Fat.

*Samose is not an ordinary medicine; it is a flesh-forming food that is adapted to the most delicate. Its tonic effect gives strength and health so that after its use for a short time, all the flesh and fat producing elements in the food will be easily assimilated and retained by the body.

The large sale Druggist Thos. W. Lytle has had on Samose since he first introduced it in Rushville and the wonderful results following its use have made him such an enthusiastic believer in its great merits that he gives his personal guarantee to refund the money if Samose does not make thin people fat and restore strength and health.

When a gain in weight is noticed after Samose has been used for a week or ten days, and health has improved, and you notice yourself growing stronger, you certainly should feel more than satisfied with what you have received from the small cost of 50 cents. Sent post-paid on receipt of price, 50 cents.

Uncle Joe Cannon's insurmountable smile transmutes a busted pair into four of a kind.

The machine may be smashed in New York, but the Empire state would be as lonesome without a boss as the universe minus a creator.

The National G. A. R. is against dollar a day pensions. They believe they should be regulated by the respective flatness of individual soldiers' purses, rather than the fullness of Uncle Sam's wallet.

Surprising honesty is shown by recent returning tourists from Europe. A year of Billy Loeb, and a court with claws has availed more than the writings of all the moralists from Plate down to Hoke Smith.

It is becoming more and more evident every day that the interest of the farmer in politics will have a good and far-reaching effect for a better government. True he has always come to the polls on election day and cast his vote, but never in the history of the country has he shown as much care in making up his mind as to how he shall cast his vote as he is doing at this time.

Essentially, he is a protective tariff man. Agitate as they may the party advocating a free trade policy will find that the farmer will have none of it. A protective policy has come to stay, modified, it is true in some cases, but not essentially weakened. The farmers are the supreme power in this country, great in prosperity, in their influence on business interests and he today takes front rank in the political life of the nation.

The average farmer is very far from being a politician in the sense of an office-seeker, but his political convictions are deep, clean and strong, based on conscientious principles. If a lot of demagogues and smooth politicians think they can twist the farmers vote and make it tail out their own little kites they are bound to be disappointed. He is a protectionist and not a free-trader. All this rant against the tariff is made to fool the farmer but under it he knows there has never been a time when he received such prices for everything he raise as now. The farmer is not fooled by campaign hot air. He is satisfied.

Speed, the Cause.

The frightful results of the two interurban wrecks that have occurred within the borders of the State within the last two weeks, point out an awful lesson.

"Disobeyed the orders," or "overran the orders," is the way the newspaper stories account for the matter.

The public is likely to take it for granted that railroad companies will very likely be glad to learn of any improved system of handling trains or of any proposed law that will remove the possibility of an accident.

In considering these matters does it not occur that the public itself is somewhat to blame for such accidents? It is not true that the public is constantly demanding more rapid transportation?

Speed, speed all the time. Isn't it true that the average American is willing to take his life in his own hands almost any time in order to save a few minutes' time? If two railroads cover the same territory which is it that gets the business? Not the one that makes the slowest time—cinch.

We have read of incompetency and criminal neglect on the part of the poor devils who are alleged to have caused the horrible wrecks that have occurred in Indiana within two weeks, costing nearly fifty lives.

And they "overran their orders." They took awful chances in order to make speed, in order that their cars should not be behind a schedule that the officers of the road created from a demand made by the public.

Within a few short days the results of these frightful wrecks will be generally forgotten and the public will go about its business in the same way, complaining all the time of the railroads because it requires more than twenty minutes to ride as far as twenty miles.

Whenever the public demands a slower train schedule the possibilities of wrecks will be reduced to a minimum.

Violating orders, "overrunning orders," is not the proper thing, all admit, right now, but is it not the truth that we do approve, that we actually do applaud, when orders are violated and the violator "gets away with it."

Might just as well begin to erase St. Paul off the map. There's no stopping the exodus.

Why not a dignified ex-president, who could retire on the Hill in perfect peace and quietude?

The constant howl against bossism in any political party is merely a flimsy curtain behind which one crowd of politicians get the ascendancy over another.

It is some relief for three days to pass without even a single wreck.

Local man makes up his mind to join the regular army when his wife leaves him for her mother. Uncle Sam probably could not feed them all if every deserted husband would seek shelter in the ranks.

It is said that Berlin is hilarious over a German version of "Rings on my Fingers and Bells on my Toes." This may even up somewhat for all that some of those German composers have done to us.

The one man who has inveighed against bossism is today the biggest boss and the most powerful ruler in this free country.

DETERMINATION WON.

(Greensburg News.)

The presence in this city of William Jennings Bryan on October 5th, when he will deliver his famous lecture, "The Price of a Soul," is the result of unusual perseverance and the exercise of considerable skill. As is well known, Mr. Bryan is in far greater demand than any other man on the lecture platform, and the lecture committee of thousands of towns and cities are constantly making efforts to secure his services. One lecture bureau alone has applications enough for his time to fill over three years solid. When the ladies of the Presbyterian church of this city decided to get Mr. Bryan here for a lecture, they realized how difficult a thing they were undertaking, but they started in in a determined fashion and sent letter after letter and telegram after telegram until Mr. Bryan began to take a little notice of them. When he was in Rushville recently he told one of his friends from here that these Greensburg ladies had convinced him that the only way he could do would be to come to Greensburg right away, and this he is doing, although many larger places have been on the waiting list for several years.

AMUSEMENTS

The Colonial theater, Indianapolis, is proving a popular and convenient place of amusement for out-of-town visitors.

Appreciating the fact that suburban residents like to start home on afternoon and early evening cars, the management has arranged the performances so that the matinee is over in ample time for them to catch the five o'clock cars, and the first bill of the continuous performance at night is over in time to catch the nine o'clock cars. The theater is but two short blocks north of the traction terminal station, on Illinois street, making it but a step from the theater to the cars.

The Colonial is presenting the highest class vaudeville, being on the Sullivan & Considine circuit. This week Anna Eva Fay, the Woman of Mystery, is the headliner, with a strong bill in support. The prices are always popular, and you are assured of always seeing a good show at The Colonial.

The Vaudet management will offer a good program tonight in the Than-houser film, "A 29 Cent Robbery." A rascal visits the home of a little girl and is frightened away by her entrance just after he has started his operations. He succeeds in getting a toy bank of hers with 29 cents in it, but the loss to her is greater than if it had been a million. After her parents are unsuccessful in putting the police on the trail of the robber, the child goes to headquarters and orders the police out. They are impressed by her and start on the hunt of the culprit. Several arrests are made, but they all prove to be the wrong man. Finally the girl starts out on the search and the manner in which she meets with success is exceedingly interesting. A new illustrated song will be sung.

The Star Grand will offer two comedy subjects tonight. The first is entitled "You Stole my Purse." In fact, nobody stole the purse, but the mother-in-law gets into awful trouble when she tries to find the owner. A lively, clever comedy and a laughing hit. The second subject entitled "Who's Who," is a little comedy of mistaken identity. "Spider O'Brien," a pugilist, and the Rev. S. O. Binns, have some unusual adventures when they exchange destinations. This is also a good laughable comedy. Sinclair will give a change in his musical act, and the singing, talking and dancing pictures will be a complete change.

The Palace will offer "Little Boy," a Selig Polyscope film tonight. It is a juvenile subject of considerable merit, telling the story of a boy, from his childhood up until he is married and settled down in a cottage of his own. He is called out of the city and returns home earlier than expected to find his wife in the arms of one of her former admirers. The thrilling climax to the tale is unusual. A new song will be sung.

Buenos Aires is the fourth city in the two Americas and 20 per cent. of all the people of Argentina live within a radius of twenty miles of the capital.

CHAPTER III.

THE GIRL IN THE CHAIR.

CADWALLADER HUNTER appeared to be a leader of society. He was one of those strange beings—heraldic, rampant, disregardant—who are born snobs, in spite of good birth and good breeding. Therefore he was not a genuine article (since no snob can be genuine), but had molded himself into a thing of airs and affectations. Nevertheless he managed to impress most second rate people and some who were first rate. Those who did not live in New York believed him to be of consequence in that city, and the Paris Herald always reported his comings and goings. He had at least a bowing acquaintance with all the richest Americans on board, and he mixed with his greetings here and there a careless "Do you know we have Lord Loveland on the ship—the Marquis of Loveland? Such a good looking young man; one of the oldest and most distinguished peerages in England; family of soldiers since the dark ages, though the less said about some of them since the days of the Georges the better. This boy is not so bad as some of the old boys before him. Not to be despised by debutantes, eh?"

"Do I know him? Why, in a way we're connections by marriage. You must remember pretty Lady Betty Bulkeley, who took us all by storm a year or two ago—sister of the Duke of Stanforth? Jimmy Harborough, whom she married, is, I believe, a forty-second cousin of mine, and Lady Betty and Lord Loveland are related. So you see—"

And for fear that they should see something that he did not wish them to see—he pattered away to "get at" Loveland before any one could possibly have the chance to find out that they two were strangers.

Meanwhile Loveland had not been wasting time.

He thought that Jim Harborough's hint about "deep sea fish" was a wise one, wiser than he would have expected from Harborough. Still, there was no harm in keeping his eyes open, and, having kept them open from the first moment after coming on board, he had discovered several very pretty girls. Unluckily, he was too ignorant of American society to know which of his fellow passengers were most important. Sure of his chair, on which the name of "Loveland" already appeared in the steward's handwriting, he paced up and down and all round the deck, pipe in mouth and hands in pockets.

A great many other people were parading up and down also.

After half an hour's walk Val had selected two girls from the "rosebud garden" which he felt bloomed for his benefit in this mammoth floating flower bed. There were so many attractive ones that it was difficult to choose, yet Val did not doubt that he had weeded out the best, and he hoped that of the pair one might be the principal unmarried millionairess of the Mauretania.

There could hardly have been a greater contrast between girls than between these two whom Lord Loveland had mentally set apart for himself as a man picks out the most becoming neckties from a box on a shop counter.

One, who walked the deck with an elderly man whose likeness of feature proclaimed him her father, was very tall, almost as tall as Loveland, who could be a six footer when he took the trouble not to slouch. She was slender in all the right places and rounded in all the right places, her waist being so slim that she seemed held together only by a spine and a ladylike ligament or two, which means faultlessness of figure according to fashion plate standards. She had burnished auburn hair and magnificent yellow gray eyes rimmed with dark lashes.

Val said to himself that the mater would be pleased with a daughter-in-law of this type and that such a girl would never make her husband ashamed. He could not imagine falling in love with her hard brilliance. But then he wasn't going to America to fall in love. His intentions were strictly businesslike. And this girl was bound to be admired everywhere.

Loveland's second choice might have been his first for some reasons, and in fact she was his first by impulse, only she did not look as obviously an heiress as the other. Neither was she so obviously a beauty, yet her charm leaped at the beholder with the briefest glance, especially if that beholder were a man.

She was not very tall, and she was a slim slip of a creature not in the least like a fashion plate, but suggestive of soft natural curves even in her navy blue tailor made frock.

If she had been stagestruck and had asked for a chance in the chorus a theatrical manager would have found himself giving it to her, he hardly knew why—more because she said she wanted it than on the strength of her voice or form or features. Then, having yielded so far to her magnetism, he would have said to himself: "She isn't striking enough for the front row or even the second. She must go into the third." And there she would have gone docilely. Yet the critics and all other men with eyes would have picked her out, and presently she would have been more noticed than the beauties in the front row. By and by, when there arose a little part with a few lines to speak, she would have got it, and at last, in some way or other, it would have been she who was making the "hit of the piece."

Lord Loveland did not say anything of this sort to himself, but he felt a faint electric shock of interest every time they passed and repassed each other, though after the first she did not look at him with the big brown eyes that surely had the prettiest, most bewitching lashes ever seen.

Val made up his mind at last that

WEAK, WEARY WOMEN.

Learn the Cause of Daily Woes and End Them.

When the back aches and throbs. When housework is torture. When the night brings no rest nor sleep.

When urinary disorders set in. Women's lot is a weary one. There is a way to escape these woes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure such ills. Have cured women herein Rushville.

This is one Rushville woman's testimony:

Mrs. William Merrill, 332 West Fourth street, Rushville, Ind., says: "For some time I suffered from a weak and painful back and I was also subject to headache. I had but little energy and the simplest of my household duties was a burden. My husband finally procured Doan's Kidney Pills for me at F. B. Johnson & Co.'s Drug Store and since taking them my condition has been better in every way. I am grateful to Doan's Kidney Pills for their good work."

AN EASY AND HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR.

Who does not know of the value of sage and sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft, glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than sage and sulphur, if properly prepared. The Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, put up an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. It is sold by all leading druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the manufacturers upon receipt of price.

he would walk no more, but would sit down and think questions over. Besides, for some moments the enchanting girl in the navy blue frock had ceased to flit to and fro. Therefore he went toward the sheltered corner where he knew his deck chair was waiting for him and to his extreme surprise found her comfortably installed in it.

For a moment Loveland was more conceited than he had ever been in his life, which is saying not a little. He told himself that the girl must have found out who he was and that this was her artful way of scraping acquaintance. She had taken possession of his chair with his name upon it, waiting for him to come and claim his property and expecting the conversation which would be sure to follow.

He was conscious of a shock of disappointment. In spite of the witching, curled eyelashes he had not fancied her that sort of obvious, flirting girl, and like other spoiled young men, a conquest which fell to him easily was less worth making. Nevertheless he still wanted to know her.

The chair next to his was unoccupied, though usurpers were warned off by the name of "Mr. James R. Smythe" boldly painted in black letters across the back. Stretching away to the left was a row of Smythe chairs which Val did not trouble to count. He merely received the impression of a large family of impending Smythes and was glad that they were not assembled. Risking the avalanche of Smythehood which might overwhelm him at any instant, he sat down in the empty chair next to his own, expecting the girl to glance up and down and flutter the coquettish lashes. To his bewilderment her tactics were more subtle. She did not look up at all, but calmly went on reading her book, a volume of disagreeably intellectual suggestion.

This development of the game was interesting because surprising, but Val still regarded it as a game. He looked at the girl, while she, apparently unconscious of or indifferent to his nearness, slowly turned leaf after leaf. She turned so many that Loveland grew impatient. Besides, a man had begun to walk up and down in front of the line of Smythe chairs, fastening upon him so baleful an eye that he feared at any instant to be dispossessed of his borrowed resting place.

At last he decided to be bold and wait no longer. "What am I to do if Mr. James R. Smythe comes along and orders me out?" he asked pleasantly in a low yet conversational tone. The girl glanced up for the first time, suddenly and as if startled. She had the air of having been deeply absorbed in her book and of not being sure that her neighbor had spoken to her; also she looked extremely young and innocent.

"I said what am I to do if Mr. James R. Smythe comes along and orders me out?" Val repeated. "That's what I thought you said," replied the girl, meeting his admiring, quizzical eyes with a somewhat bewildered yet defensive gaze. "But—why should you say it to me?"

"Isn't that rather hard hearted of you?" asked Loveland. "I don't understand you at all," said the girl. "You look like a gentleman, so I suppose you can't mean to be rude or impertinent. But if not you seem to be talking nonsense."

This was straightforward, to say the least, yet her voice was so sweet and girlish, with such a dainty little drawl in it, that the rebuke did not sound as severe as if spoken with sharper accents.

"Of course I don't mean to be rude or impertinent," Loveland defended himself, at a loss for the next move in the game. "But I thought—that is, I mean—you know, that is my chair. I'm delighted you should have it."

"Your chair?" echoed the girl. "Oh, you are mistaken. No wonder, if you thought that I—but even then you couldn't have dreamed I'd take it on purpose."

"No-o, I"—began Loveland, looking guilty. Her eyes were on him. "You did think so!" she exclaimed. "I see you did. That was why you—and yet I don't see how you could have fancied I should know who you were unless—are you a very famous person?"

Lord Loveland laughed rather foolishly. "I think you've punished me enough," he said. "Then you admit that you deserve to be punished?"

"Perhaps."

"Which means that you did believe I took your chair on purpose." "I didn't stop to think," said Loveland, telling the truth as usual, but less truculently than usual.

"You are English, aren't you?" the girl asked, looking at him with her brown, bewildering eyes. "Oh, yes," replied Loveland in a tone which added, "of course."

"I was sure you were. I suppose you don't understand American girls very well or perhaps any girls yet. But, then, few men do really, except poets or novelists. And you're not a poet or a novelist?"

"Rather not!" "You speak as though I'd asked if you were a pickpocket. Do you despise writers?"

"I'd be sorry to be one. Wouldn't you?" The girl laughed. "I am one," she said. "I write stories."

"You're chaffing." "No, I'm not. Why should you think so?"

"Oh, well, because you don't look as if you wrote."

"Thank you. I suppose you mean that for a compliment. But women who write aren't scarecrows nowadays, if they ever were."

"Well, anyhow, you're too young."

"I've been writing stories and getting them published, too, ever since I was sixteen. That's some years ago now. Please don't say you wouldn't have thought it! That would be too obvious even for an average American's idea of an average Englishman."

"As you thought," said Loveland, "I don't know much about Americans yet. I'm going over to the States to learn."

"The States! How English that sounds! We think we're all of America—all that's worth talking about in ordinary conversation. You thought I'd taken your chair. I believe you really did think that."

"I did," admitted Val.

"I wonder why. My aunt's name is on it."

"Oh!" said Loveland.

"See," went on the girl, leaning forward and displaying the label in the deck steward's handwriting. "I do see," said Val. "But that happens to be my name."

"Loveland?"

"Yes."

The girl blushed brightly. And she was more attractive than ever when she blushed. "Oh, how very odd! Then perhaps this is your chair! How perfectly horrid!" She began to unwind herself from the rug which was wrapped round her as a chrysalis round an incipient butterfly.

"Please don't get up." Loveland's tone was almost imploring. "Do keep the chair. I want you to keep it."

"Thank you very much. But I don't want to keep it if it's yours, and I think now it probably is."

"But you expected to find yours here."

"No; it wasn't that. But as I was passing I saw my aunt's name on the back of a chair, and because the deck steward had been told to put one in a nice sheltered place I took it for granted that this was hers. I didn't know there was another Loveland on the passenger list."

"I noticed there was a Mrs. Loveland," said Val, "but didn't think much about it, as she wasn't likely to turn out a relative of mine. And my name isn't on the list. I came in the place of—another man."

As he made this explanation, with a slight pause which meant the recollection of his promise to Jim Harborough, Major Cadwallader Hunter went by, walking slowly, and, having long distance ears, heard as he passed. He was waiting for his chance to "noble" Lord Loveland, and afterward he remembered those few last words which he had caught.

"I'll go and look for the other Loveland chair," said the girl.

"You must do nothing of the sort," exclaimed Val.

"Oh, it's easy to see you're an Englishman. American men don't order us about like that."

Loveland laughed. "I didn't order you about. I ordered you to sit still."

"That's just as bad. You have the air of being used to give orders."

"I am. You see, I'm a soldier."

"Oh, what a relief! I began to be afraid you were a duke."

THE COLONEL IS THE NEW LEADER

New York Republicans So Nominated Him.

THE DEFEAT OF MR. SHERMAN

Amid Scenes Such as Were Never Before Witnessed in a New York State Republican Convention, Theodore Roosevelt Was Elected Chairman—He at Once Proceeded to Crowd Foes Off All Committees.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt of Oyster Bay defeated in the Republican state convention Vice President Sherman of Utica for the temporary chairmanship. The vote was 567 to 445. There were 1,015 delegates in the convention, but three did not vote—Colonel Roosevelt, Vice President Sherman and Gilchrist Stuart of New York city.

A total vote of 508 was necessary to a choice, and the result shows that Colonel Roosevelt had 59 majority and 122 plurality over Sherman. The old guard leaders, headed by William Barnes, Jr., Speaker J. W. Wadsworth and their friends, said that they were not at all dismayed, not at all overcome by Colonel Roosevelt's victory and Barnes and Speaker Wadsworth said that the 445 delegates who stood up against Colonel Roosevelt and his friends did so from principle.

Colonel Roosevelt's selection was followed later in the convention proceedings by performances which were without precedent in New York Republican conventions since the organization of the party. After Colonel Roosevelt's victory no delegate representing the old guard forces was permitted to offer the resolutions calling for the appointment of committees. Only delegates friendly to Roosevelt and his adherents offered the resolutions for the appointment of a committee, and these delegates introduced their resolutions for the committee with this final clause: "and that the temporary chairman of this convention have authority to name the committees," meaning the committee on credentials, the committee on rules, the committee on permanent organization and the committee on platform.

Colonel Roosevelt celebrated the unlimited power given to him by first striking at Vice President Sherman. The Oneida-Herkimer delegation, the vice president's own delegation, had recommended for the platform committee William H. Schweitzer, a Sherman follower. Colonel Roosevelt struck out Schweitzer's name and substituted that of ex-Assemblyman Merwin K. Hart, head of the Lincoln League of Oneida county, which has supported Davenport. Roosevelt, following this stroke, displaced Timothy Woodruff from the committee on platform and put in the name of Comptroller W. A. Prendergast, and for Jacob A. Livingston of Kings. Colonel Roosevelt put Marcus B. Campbell, As temporary chairman of the convention Roosevelt then took a hand in smashing President Cronwell of the borough of Richmond, who had been recommended for a place on the committee on platform, and in Mr. Cronwell's place Roosevelt substituted Senator Josiah T. Newcomb. Mr. Cronwell, Mr. Livingston, Mr. Woodruff and Daniel F. Strobel, state committeeman for the Oneida-Herkimer district, had voted in the state committee for Mr. Sherman to be temporary chairman of the convention. Colonel Roosevelt and his friends adopted these drastic measures because they lacked the necessary votes to control the committee on platform.

William Barnes, Jr., in the presence of Speaker Wadsworth and a great throng of the delegates who had opposed Colonel Roosevelt, dictated a statement after the convention in which he said: "That Mr. Roosevelt was opposed for temporary chairman for good and sufficient reasons has been made entirely clear by the outcome. His action in leaving off the committee on resolutions delegates chosen by the delegations from their congressional districts to sit upon that committee, using a prerogative never before exercised, is the proof. Especially is the vindictiveness and disorderly quality exhibited in substituting for the man agreed upon by the delegation from the Twenty-seventh congressional district, comprising the counties of Oneida and Herkimer, in which Vice President Sherman lives."

When the session was called to order there was not standing room on the floor or in the gallery. When Roosevelt came down the aisle of the hall he was greeted with riotous cheers. Then came Vice President Sherman and the scene was repeated. Senator Root and Senator Dewey got a greeting, not too demonstrative. The aisles were choked, thousands of visitors trampled over the delegates and alternates, and the modest police force of Saratoga, consisting of two meek-eyed policemen, went down before that army like chips before a cyclone. At last Secretary Glason got an opportunity to read the call for the convention and Chairman Woodruff announced that by direction of the committee the selection of Mr. Sherman to be temporary chairman of the convention had been recommended. Then followed a speech by Mr. Woodruff in which he told of recent events in his party. All the way through Woodruff's speech was heartily responded to by the vast audience. When he read the correspondence between Roosevelt and himself concerning the selection by the committee of Sherman there were cheers and hisses.

The thunderous applause which greeted Mr. Sherman's name as Chairman Woodruff uttered it in his final sentences had not died away before Frederick Hicks, a Nassau county delegate, jumped upon his chair, and, facing the great audience, cried: "In the spirit expressed by Lincoln half a century ago, with charity to all, with malice toward none, I nominate the honorable Theodore Roosevelt." The old guard kept their seats, but the Roosevelt-Griscom delegates and the galleries burst out with volcanic explosions.

After several speeches in favor of the respective nominees, Chairman Woodruff announced that the roll would be called for vote of individual delegates, and Barnes insisted on the individual vote. The call went on amid the first silence of the day.

When the vote was announced there was a repetition of the tumultuous scenes which had characterized the convention from the start. Roosevelt's face was wreathed with a smile. The fact was not overlooked that no delegates in the old guard had moved to make the selection of Roosevelt unanimous. The colonel then made his speech. He was in fine voice and spoke slowly and distinctly. His reference to Mr. Taft as "an able, upright and distinguished president" was very heartily received. He cracked up the legislature at Albany and Governor Hughes, and most of these references were greeted by the old guard with grins.

Then came the new departures and the establishing of the record that Colonel Roosevelt has succeeded to the leadership of the Republican party in the state and leadership of Thurlow Weed, of Roscoe Conkling and Thomas C. Platt. But, unlike Weed, Conkling and Platt, Colonel Roosevelt started his leadership with no apparent desire to conciliate his foes. No member of the old guard was permitted to offer a resolution.

Roosevelt told his friends that he would certainly control the new state committee to be elected in the final hours. Already numerous changes are indicated. Roosevelt will be able to name his new state chairman, who Mr. Griscom says must be agreeable to the candidate for governor. The Roosevelt platform, which practically embodied his speech in the convention, was read to the platform committee last night by O. T. Barnard and after it had been discussed, William Barnes, Jr., who was not displaced from the committee by Roosevelt, submitted his own platform. After a long conference with Roosevelt and his adherents, Senator Root was selected to be permanent chairman of the convention.

VICTORY FOR THE DEFENSE

Lorimer Lawyer Scores One in Senate Hearing.

HEARSAY EVIDENCE IS BARRED

After Lengthy Arguments Pro and Con, Senatorial Investigating Committee Which Is Inquiring Into the Lorimer Bribery Charges Decided That Only Direct Statements Could Go In.—White Tells What He Got for Story.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—The senatorial investigating committee which is inquiring into the Lorimer election, permanently decided to hear no hearsay evidence as to bribery charges, but to allow only direct statements to go into the record. The decision was announced by Chairman Burrows after lengthy arguments by Attorneys Alfred S. Austrian and Elbridge Haney and after the chairman had cited the case of Senator Spencer of Alabama, whose election was investigated on the same ground some years ago. The ruling is a victory for the defense.

Legislator White was recalled to the stand. "After getting the money from Browne in Chicago, did you show it to anyone?" asked Austrian.

"I object," interjected Haney. "That's the very point we've been debating. They want to corroborate White's testimony by his own statements."

After consultation the committee sustained the objection. "When did you write up your experiences in the Forty-sixth general assembly—at the conclusion of the assembly?" was the next question.

This, too, was objected to by Haney on the ground that it was immaterial. On this likewise he was sustained by the committee.

White was allowed to tell, however, of the terms under which his statement was printed in the Tribune. He said that he first submitted the manuscript to Doubleday, Page & Co., Hodge's and the Kerr Publishing company, by all of whom it was rejected.

He then took it to the Tribune, which agreed to publish it, according to a letter signed by the managing editor, James Keeley, and produced in court, the consideration to be $3,250, $1,250 of which was to be paid upon publishing the story, $1,000 in thirty days and $1,000 in sixty days.

OUT OF POLITICS

President Puts Thousands of Assistant Postmasters on Civil List.

Washington, Sept. 28.—President Taft today gave certain evidence of his desire to remove the postoffice department from the field of politics by signing an executive order which will put between 7,000 and 8,000 assistant postmasters of money-order offices in the civil list. This will be followed by a recommendation to congress for legislation that will put all second- and third-class postmasters under civil service protection.

DESIRE TO LEAVE SON ASSAULTED IS EVER PRESENT HIS AGED FATHER

Ed Eck is the Fourth Man to Shake the Dust of St. Paul From His Feet.

IN JUST THE LAST FEW WEEKS

Young Man Also Took $59 Belonging to Aunt With Him, While She Was at Church.

Hokus pokus change and another emigrant gone from St. Paul, thus making a total of four in the last month, says the Greensburg Democrat. The last to shake the dust from his shoes was Ed Eck, a son of George Eck, Sr., south of St. Paul.

It has just developed that Eck left Saturday night. Fifty-nine dollars belonging to his aunt, Mrs. Louella Eck, also left with him. Ed Eck had been employed by John Meyers, a farmer, at the edge of St. Paul, for the past few weeks and he had been staying at nights at the home of his aunt, since the tragic death of her husband, Dan Eck, who met accidental death a few weeks ago by falling out of the hay mow.

Last Saturday night Mrs. Eck went to Waldron to church. She failed to take the money to the bank before it had closed and not wanting to carry so much on her person she gave it to Eck to keep for her until after church. He is still keeping it.

Mrs. Eck looked and watched for Ed at Waldron, until midnight Saturday night, but he failed to put in an appearance and has so far eluded detection. His disappearance is as complete as if the earth had opened up and swallowed him.

Eck only last winter returned from the West, where he had been for some time, prior to which time he had been a soldier in the regular army, and was in several engagements in the Philippines.

His friends are at a loss to know why he should do such a trick as he was a fine appearing young man and was well liked by all who came in contact with him.

Blaine Reynolds, Terror of Lewisville, Near Rush-Henry County Line, Breaks Loose Again.

CRAZED BY TOO MUCH WHISKEY

Escaped Before Authorities Arrived—Already Out on Bond For Similar Offense.

Blaine Reynolds ran amuck again
 Monday night and for the "steenth" time held the citizens of Lewisville in terror, says the New Castle Courier.
 In a drunken rage the young man attacked his aged father, William Reynolds, in the latter's livery barn, and after throwing a chair at him, chased the old man into the street, where he assaulted him. Aside from a few bruises the elder Reynolds was not injured.

As soon as the public became aware of the situation there was a burning of wires between Lewisville and New Castle in an effort to get the officers from the county seat to quell the drink-crazed man. Sheriff Kirk and Deputy Yost responded and within twenty-eight minutes after being summoned were on the scene of the battle.

In the meantime the elder Reynolds having heard of the coming of the officers, took his son to the Pennsylvania depot and it is believed placed him on board an east-bound passenger train. The Reynolds livery barn and premises were searched in vain by the officers, who remained here until a late hour, thinking that the fugitive would return.

Sheriff Kirk and Deputy Yost returned again Tuesday and made another search for Reynolds, but they failed to locate him.

It is believed here that Reynolds will turn up sooner or later although he is under indictment in the circuit court for a number of offenses. His liberty was secured by his father going his bail until the session of the October term of court.

 and G. P. Hunt.

"Big Wednesday" came up for its share of the discussion, when Will Bliss asked the merchants' opinion in regard to the bargain day. He said that the financial end of the day was a failure and that the committee had several bills to pay and did not have the money. He said that he thought it the best plan to reduce the expenses so that more money could be had for paying old bills. The Association agreed with him and the one place where it was decided that expenses should be cut down, was in the matter of advertising. It was decided to do away with the usual big bill and that each merchant advertise his own business in the newspapers, using whatever space he desired at his own expense. The question as to whether or not any more bargain days will be held this fall was left open until the next one has passed.

Just before the meeting closed, the question of holding a fall carnival was suggested to the merchants. It was said that the Davis Brothers' big livery barn, which covers a full block and which is now almost completed, might be had for the purpose. The general idea was expressed that the building would offer an ideal place for such an affair and it was looked upon with favor. H. G. Hackman, Earl Payne and Will Mulno were appointed as a committee to wait on the liverymen and learn what arrangements could be made for the use of the barns.

MILROY RESIDENTS ENGAGE IN FIGHT

Wealthy Men of That Town Participate in a Real Rough and Tumble.

NEITHER IS SERIOUSLY HURT

The picture of two wealthy men engaging in a fistie encounter that did not terminate until it had assumed all the degrees of a rough and tumble —that old fashioned kind—in which the best man was probably the one that could stick at the game the longest was portrayed in reality Sunday in Milroy, says the Greensburg News.

Jesse Thompson and Bruce Arbuckle had a grievance against each other and they chose Sunday afternoon as a time for final settlement.
 According to the report they met,
 they came together and they mixed.
 They evidently thought the principal steets of the town needed sweeping, for they rolled and tossed each other over them. They cleared the dust for some distance, and their little performance lasted more than a half hour. Neither combatant was hurt, there being only a few scratches inflicted on either countenance and today it is said they are good friends.
